Boost employee productivity & wellbeing

WITH
Dr Kristy
GOODWIN

Employees are now working and living in an age of digital distraction and dependence. Many of us feel like we're a servant to our screens and tethered to technology 24/7. Emerging research confirms that our brains haven't evolved to cope with the constant digital bombardment we face, resulting in impaired productivity and compromised health and wellbeing. It's critical that employees develop healthy and sustainable digital behaviours so they can thrive in the digital age.

In this highly practical Lunch and Learn seminar Dr Kristy Goodwin equips employees and executives with science-backed solutions to bolster their productivity and preserve their wellbeing, without prescribing digital detoxes, or phone bans. Dr Kristy translates the neuroscience and psychology behind why we find it hard to digitally disconnect, into essential information and tips so we can leverage the benefits technologies offer us and minimise the pitfalls. She addresses how common digital behaviours can hijack our efficiency at work and potentially sabotage our sleep, physical health and mental wellbeing. Kristy arms participants with realistic, research-based strategies so they can flourish in a digital age.
